

Put Patients First

Transforming Care with Personal Health Records

James D. Ralston, MD MPH

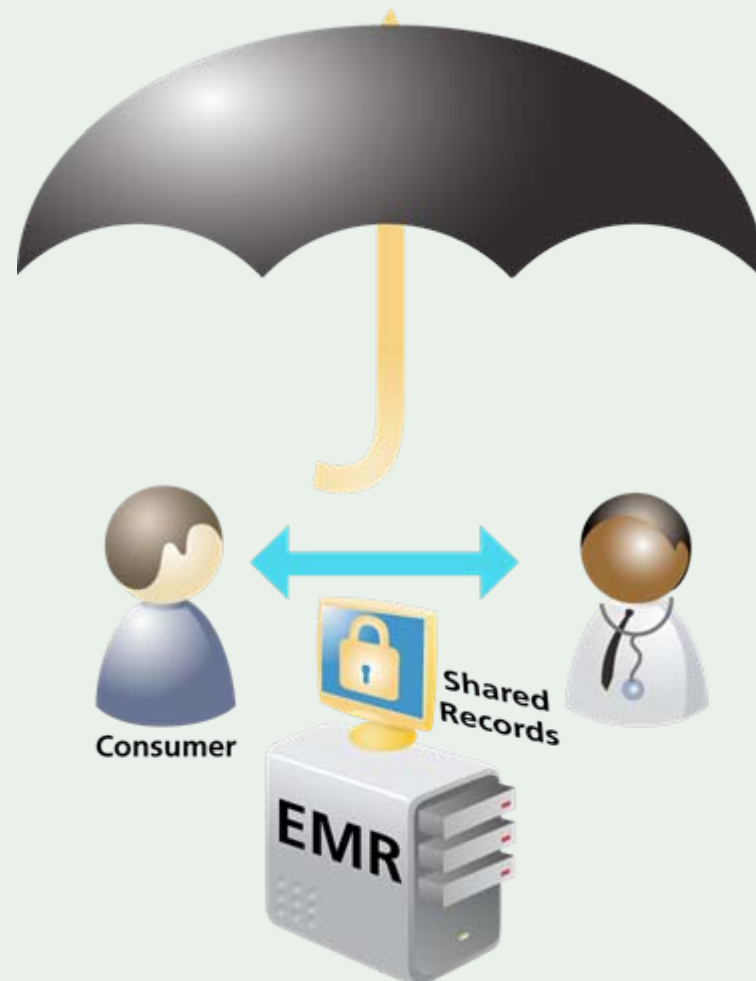

Connecting patients and providers is key

GroupHealth

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Personal health records matter to patients

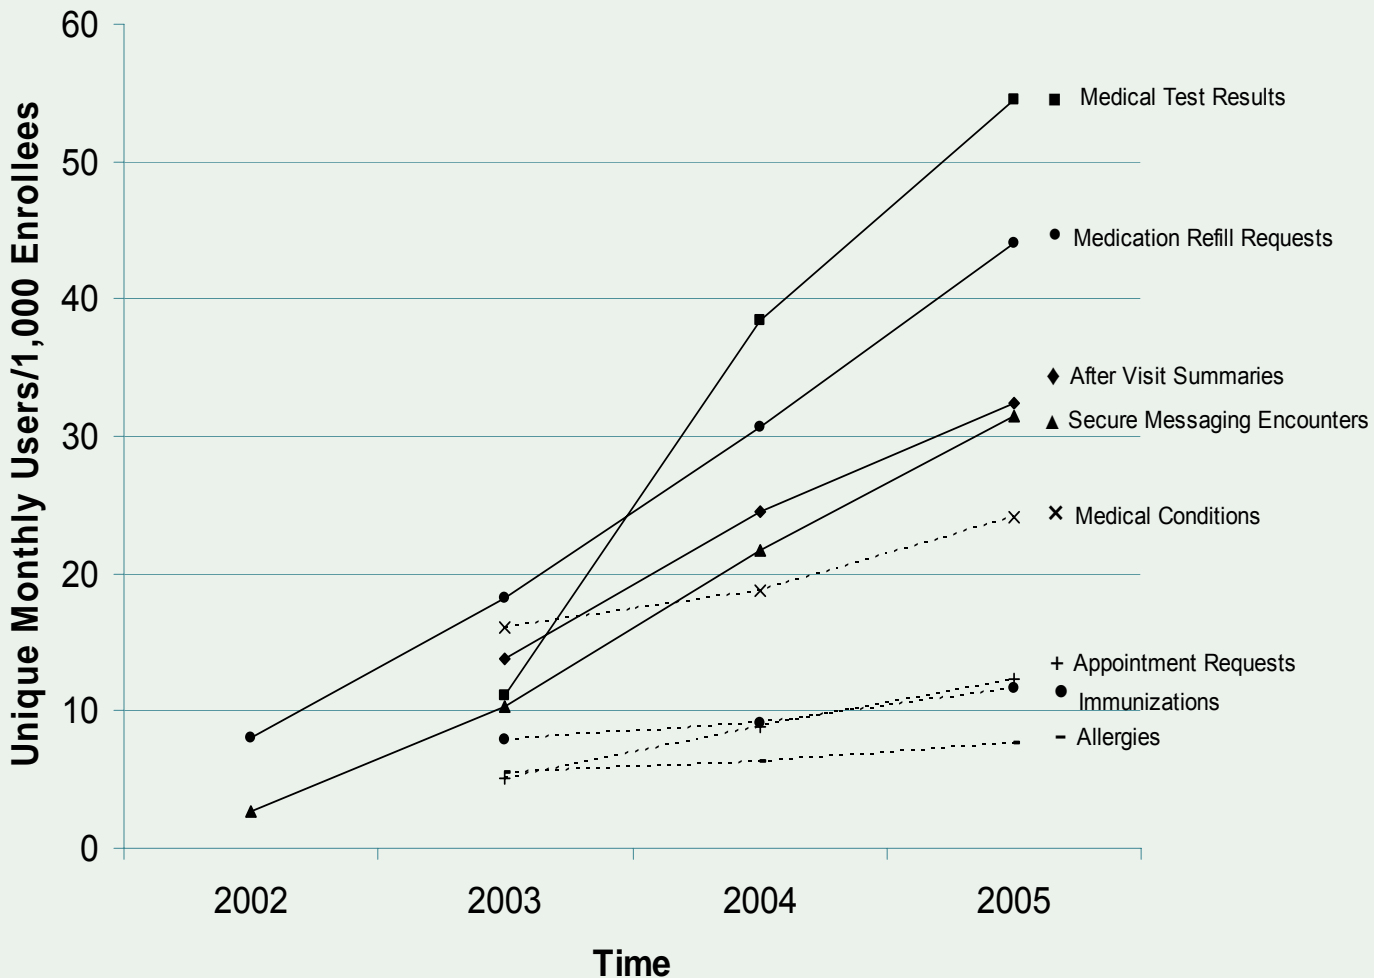

GroupHealth

I feel much safer now than I did before ... If I had to pick one thing out of how this [programme] has affected my life and my everyday living, [it's] the fact that I'm not chronically worrying about everything. If I didn't have any access to knowing what's going on with my health, I think I'd probably go back on ulcer medicine ... If I suddenly didn't have all this, I would probably be just a raving hypochondriac.

-(Ralph, 61 years old with diabetes, receives care at University of Washington)

Personal health records need to be part of ongoing care

Moving personal health records forward

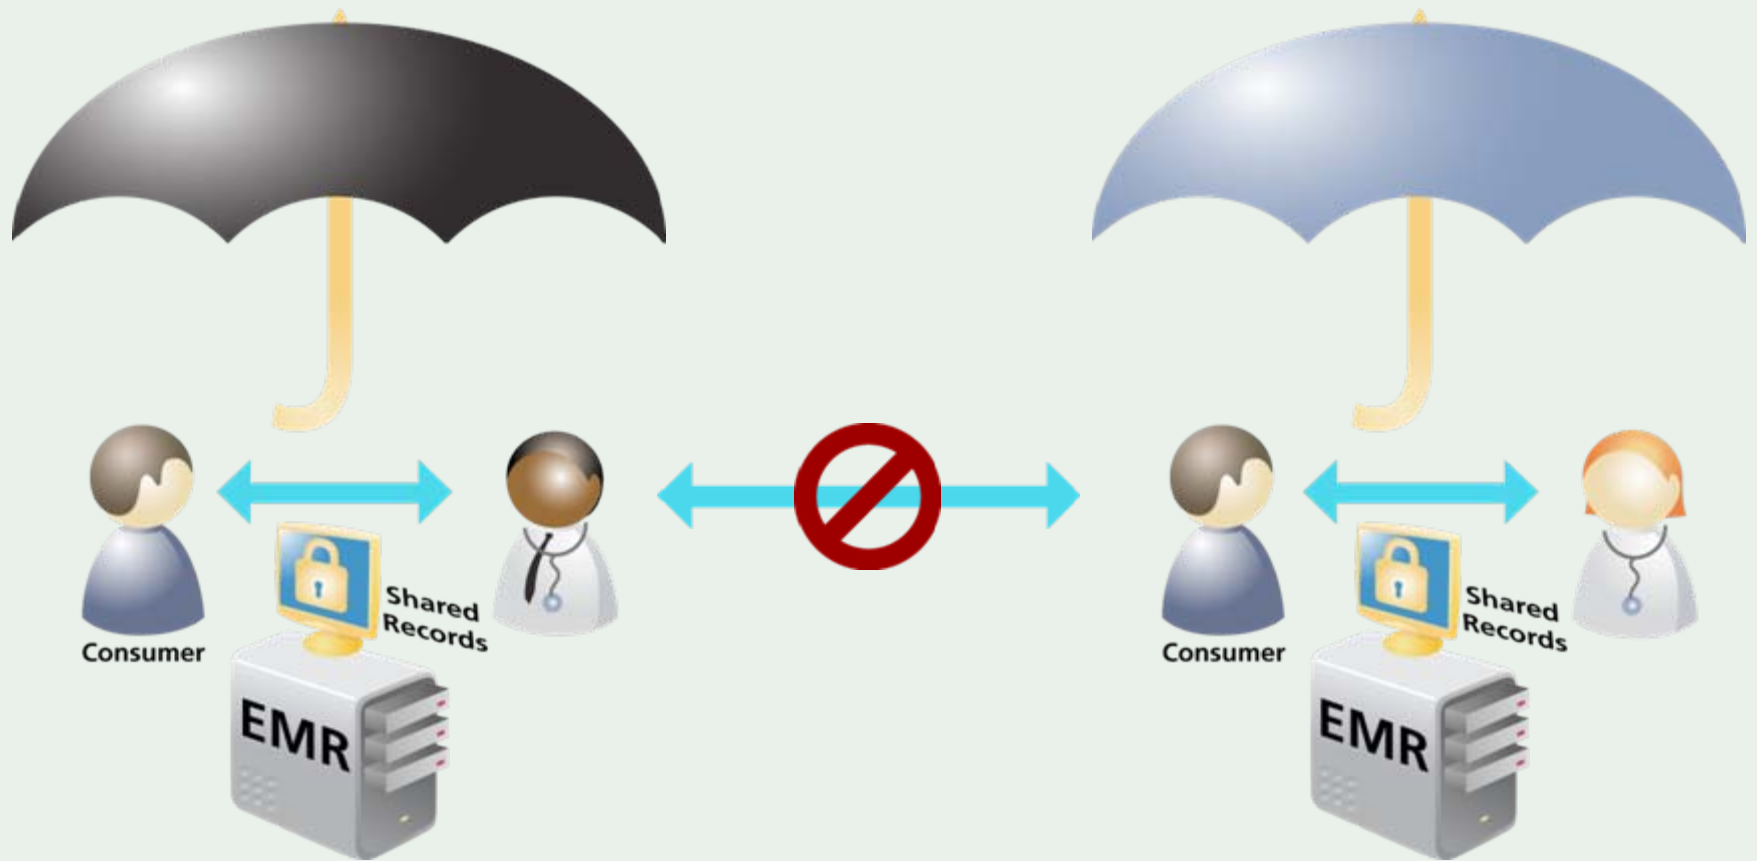

GroupHealth

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Interoperability

Bring Consumer Access Services under the umbrella of trust and action

Bring Consumer Access Services under the umbrella of trust and action

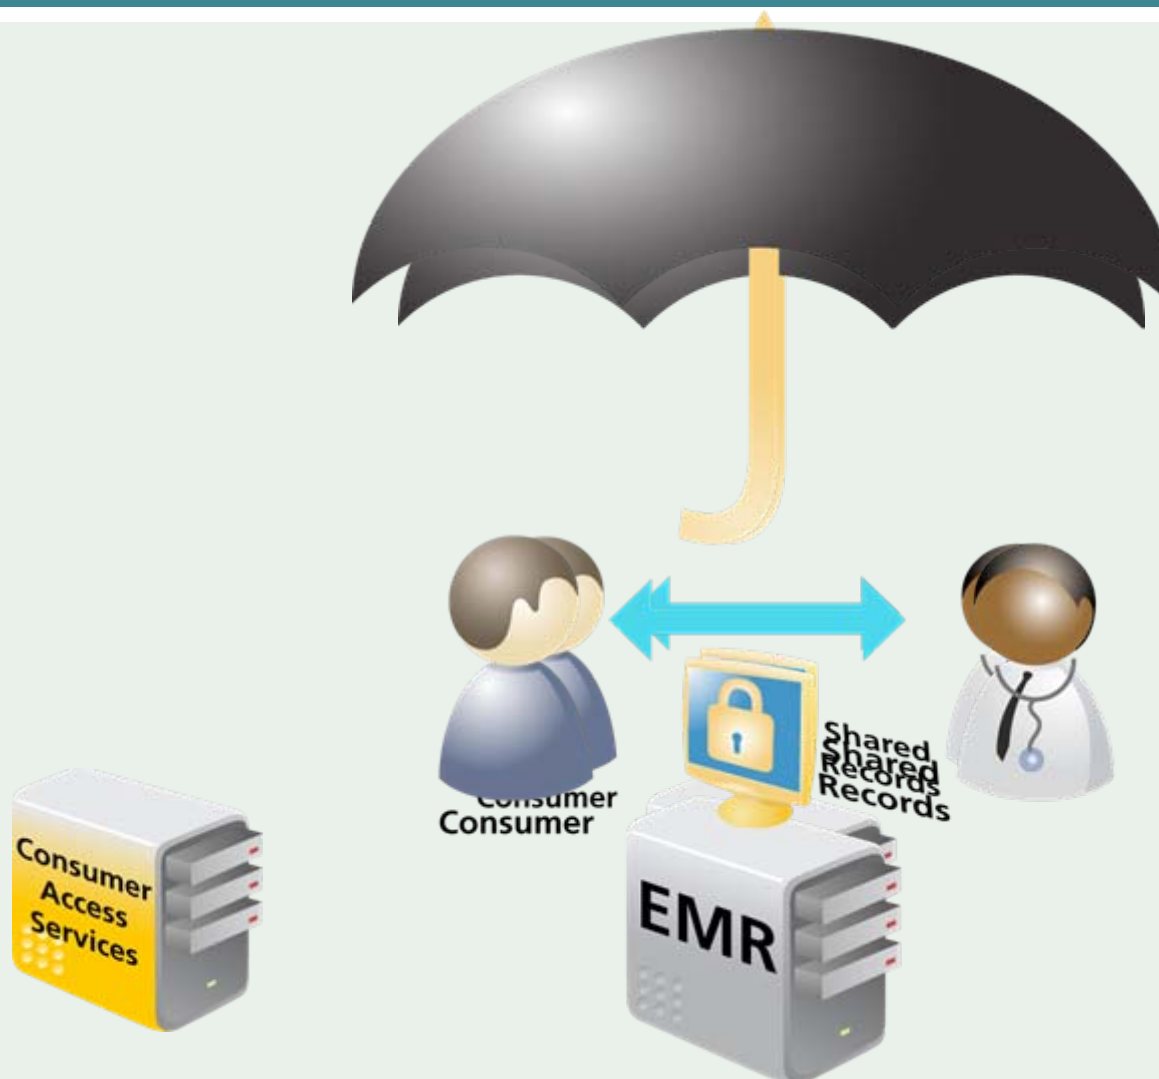

Bring Consumer Access Services under the umbrella of trust and action

GroupHealth

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Thank you!

GroupHealth

 UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON